

ENDEMIC OF THE RAINFOREST

Length: Full day

Our birding day will be focus on the elusive, tame and cryptic birds that inhabits this unique ecosystem known as the Valdivian Rainforest or Southern Temperate Rainforest. The forest itself is a gem. The exuberant and dense vegetation is home of specialties that any birder wants to find once visiting the region. We will be walking through the trails looking for the four species of the Rhinocryptidae family as the Chucao, Black-throated Huet Huet, Ochre-flanked and Magellanic Tapaculo. The park is also the place to look for other specialties as the Magellanic Woodpecker, White-throated Treerunner, and Thorn-tailed Rayadito. With some luck we can also have the chance to spot the Chilean Hawk and Buteo raptors that inhabits these latitudes. On the way back from the park we will also have some time to scan the shore of the Reloncaví fjord looking for waterfowl and shorebirds.
